It is the policy of Erickson Veterinary Hospital to not board animals from the same household together in the same cage or kennel. We have found that the stress of boarding is sometimes too much and even pets raised together may lash out at the other and cause severe injury, even death.

Cat owners should be aware that any situation that brings cats together increases the risk of the spread of communicable illnesses.

We are warning all boarding clients that the possibility exists that your cat may come in contact with upper respiratory illnesses while boarding. We use good infection control procedures on a routine basis; however there is still the possibility of contracting illness in any multiple cat environment. Therefore we are asking that cat owners must recognize that boarding your cat may put your cat at risk. Should your cat come down with an illness while boarding, or after having been boarded, we will be glad to provide necessary medical care. As the owner, you will need to assume responsibility for all charges incurred.

I understand that I am boarding my cat(s) at the risk of contracting an illness while boarding. Further, I understand that I am responsible for all charges incurred for treatment.
